FOXFIRE MOUNTAIN
ZIP LINE ADVENTURE PARK

WHAT IS A "FOXFIRE"

Back in the day, before park rangers were available to burn off the underbrush to control forest fires, early settlers and farmers would catch a fox and tie a foot-long string to his tail and on the other end of the string they would tie a rag soaked in kerosene. They would then light the kerosene and set the fox free. The fox would run in circles trying to out run the fire chasing him. Within minutes the fire would burn out and the fox would stop, chew off the string and go on his merry way none the worse for wear, (except maybe for a mild heart attack). The result was a controlled "foxfire" that burned off the underbrush to prevent future forest fires. Today while our mountain is still called "Foxfire Mountain", all our foxes are protected and loved.

Excellent Zip line Tour

The Foxfire zip lines, especially the Goliath, were fantastic!
Our guides, Blake and Shane, made sure we were all safe and had fun. Great experience with our 2 teenagers.
